mJobTime Corporation Appoints David Perry to West Coast Position

BEAUMONT, Texas (July 14, 2008) – mJobTime Corporation, provider of mJobTime™, a leading enterprise-level time and attendance software solution for the construction industry, announces the appointment of David Perry as senior account executive.

Perry will be responsible for growing the company's customer base in West Coast markets.

Before joining mJobTime, Perry had a successful sales career in the semiconductor industry, where he was a top producer and rose through the ranks to serve as general manager of SPI Semiconductor. More recently, he held a key sales position at Exaktime, a provider of portable time and attendance tracking systems.

"David brings solid experience in selling time tracking software to the construction industry, and we think he will be a strong asset in increasing our already strong presence in the region," said Richard Daniels, vice president and CFO. "With his background in technology and knowledge of construction, David has the right qualifications to help contractors solve their time and attendance problems with mJobTime."

mJobTime Corporation is a leader in enterprise-level time and attendance software solutions for the construction industry. The company has delivered easy-to-use, scalable and customizable software for more than 15 years, enabling organizations to successfully manage their mobile workforce. The flagship product, mJobTime™, delivers a significant savings of time and money by improving and streamlining control over labor and equipment at the job site.
